Research Methods in Criminal Justice (CJS 300) is intended to acquaint you with the process of conducting social science research with emphasis on the field of criminal justice. Research is an essential aspect of our everyday lives and many of us take for granted the facts we hear and the statistics we reference. You will learn to become scrutinizing consumers and able producers of research and information. You will work as a class to conduct a research study on campus exploring an important issue.

The learning environment in CJS 300 is dynamic and draws on a variety of teaching and learning approaches including:

- interactive learning modules
- discussion boards
- classroom lecture
- webpage design
- group activities
- computer lab exercises
